

27. Gorilla to the Rescue

A nearly fatal accident at the San Francisco Zoo today frightened and amazed all who witnessed it. A young boy named Erin O'Neil from Orlando, Florida, fell thirty feet into the center of the zoo's gorilla enclosure. Fearful onlookers panicked as the female gorilla approached the boy and picked him up in her arms. The silverback carried him to a door within the cage. Zookeepers were then able to pick the boy up with little difficulty. O'Neil was transported to a local hospital and is doing good. The gentle gorilla is the zoo's latest hero and appears to be handling the media attention and publicity gracefully. "He's truly a gentle giant", the zoo director said.

It was an eventful day for this male silverback gorilla at the San Diego Zoo.
